Hello,

Microsoft needs to be broken up into several different companies. They have way too much power at this time and any "punishment" they are given that allows them to stay as one company will be side stepped and they will continue to squash innovation. Bill Gates has proved he is no idiot, he will do whatever he can (and believe me, he can do it) to screw the world and get more money for Microsoft. The good of the world, the advancement of technology, putting computers in schools, making software more secure, easier to use, whatever: these are means to an end for Bill Gates. This man is more powerful than the president and that is not right. End this disgusting display of control this one man has over the world as we know it and break up Microsoft.

Sincerely,
Paul Bradley
